

To whom it may concern,

Amna is an enthusiastic member of CORE, in which she focuses on our social media, events and marketing programs. She started as a member within the marketing cluster and within half a year proved that she was the right person to lead the team in the absence of our CMO. Currently she has taken over this function as interim, showcasing not only her flexibility but also excellent leadership skills.

Her period as CMO started during the busiest time of the year, with events like the Rabobank Duurzame Innovatieprijs, the Mikrocentrum Vision, Robotics and Motion fair and the iLinqs fair. Next to having the responsibilities on the reach-out of these events, she also took new members under her wings.

She shows good communication skills and is able to reduce complex problems into solvable challenges. She can switch easily between different stakeholders like students and industry and has a strong will to aid others within the team.

In my opinion, Amna is a hard-working and adaptive student. Who doesn't shy away from working hard or making a few extra hours. Always has an open mindset and can take feedback. Overall CORE has been more than positive about the collaboration and is looking forward to the rest of her career within our organization or that of our partners. It will be a big loss to the organization when she decides to quit the project, however we wish her the best in her future career and will remain jealous of her next employer.

With kind regards,

Dirk van Meer, CEO CORE

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to read 'Dirk van Meer', with a long horizontal flourish extending to the right.